From Frank Leslie's (N. Y.) Chimney Corner,
HON. LEWIS MCKENZIE,
[Leading Merchant of Alexandria, Virginia.] Lewis McKenzie was born in Alexandria, Va., October, 1810—the son of a Scotch Highlander, who emigrated to America shortly after the Revolutionary war, and settled in Virginia.
This son of the McKenzie clan became emancipated of one of those sweet, peachy-faced girls so numerous in the Old Dominion. But the parents of the young lady forbade the match. They could not get married in Virginia or Maryland. No smiling and inviting Gretchen Green was in view. What was to be done?
Being a shipmaster, Captain McKenzie readily conceived a plan to remove all obstacles; and that was to get married on "neutral ground," or rather, waters. It was arranged that a clergyman should be on board; and the young lady, previously notified, got aboard, and immediately the ship "weighed anchor." When the Lexington (owned and commanded by Captain McKenzie) was midway between Virginia and Maryland, in the Potomac River, opposite Alexandria, the lovers were then and there "made fast" for life, 1797, under the flag of the Union. The minister was sent ashore in a boat, and the young couple went sailing over the seas. Of the happy but brief union, the boy Lewis was one of the children.

The war of 1812 broke out between the States and the mother country. Captain Mc-Kenzie (like many others) lost his all—several sailing vessels. He shortly afterward died.
This was a terrible blow and stroke of misfortune to the then only a boy of thirteen, with a meagre English education. He had made up his mind what to do, so one fine morning, he sailed forth in quest of employment.
His many earnest and anxious inquiries were met with but poor encouragement. But stumbling into the counting room of Fowle & Co—who may be regarded as one of the old "land marks" of Alexandria—he was more fortunate. Being favorably impressed with the bright, honest face of the little lad, and desiring to encourage him in the laudable endeavor to aid his family, they gave him employment and they found willing, ready hands to do it. The youth served his employers faithfully, winning the confidence, not only of the firm, but commanding the respect of all who had business transactions with it.
His struggles against poverty and want were gradually overcome by the frugal forethought of saving all his "loose change," which counted up wonderfully in the long run.
Young McKenzie entered the counting-room of Messrs. Fowle & Co., Alexandria, Va., in the year 1823, and remained in their employ ten years, in various capacities. First, as office and errand boy, next, as clerk; and lastly, as book-keeper and cashier.

The boy became an experienced man of business, and he now thought it time to venture out into the busy marts of trade for himself.
He left his old employers in 1833, and went regularly into the commission business, the style of the concern being Lambert & McKenzie. For twenty years the firm continued in business, prospered and grew, as did the city of Alexandria, only somewhat faster. The partnership dissolved in 1853, Mr. McKenzie succeeding the firm on his own account, and has been ever since actively engaged in adding to his well-earned fortune, of which he is the sole architect.

In all the walks of life he has been a true man—true to himself, and true to others; and his fellow-men have given him repeated and unmistakable evidence of their respect and confidence. He successfully represented the city of Alexandria in the General Assembly of Virginia, for several years.
He is the friend and strong advocate of all internal improvements in the State; the originator and author of the free banking system in Virginia; the prime mover and author of the retrocession of Alexandria to the State of Virginia. He now fills four important offices of trust. He has been presiding magistrate of Alexandria for the past eight years. For several years Mr. McKenzie has been annually re-elected President of the Alexandria, Loudoun and Hampshire railroad, and, under his judicious management, the company has been enabled to extend its operations and usefulness, by constructing a branch road. He is also President of the First National Bank of Alexandria, and the financial success of that institution has demonstrated the wisdom of his selection to the responsible position. He is also a member of the City Council of Alexandria.

Last summer, his fellow citizens gave him another substantial token of their regard and confidence, by running him as an independent Republican for Congress, in opposition to the regular nominee, and he was elected by an overwhelming majority. He is now one of the working members of Congress, being in the committee rooms by nine o'clock in the morning, ready for business.
Though sixty years of age, Mr. McKenzie is as active and as brisk as a man of forty. He is always in a hurry about some business of his own, or somebody else's—more likely the latter; and no man with the asthma can keep up with him, walking, while about it. Being blessed with a good constitution, temperate habits, and a good digestion, an amiable disposition, and exuberant flow of spirits, he is a man to be envied as well as commended.

He is one of the most charitable of men; he has no end in a smile for every one he meets, and a kind word of encouragement for all who come to him for advice.
